

New BMWs are go

BMW Motorrad UK has announced launch dates and pricing details of the five new machines showcased towards the end of last year, alongside pricing details for existing models.

Following the world premiere of the R1200 GS Adventure at last year's International Motorcycle Show at Birmingham's NEC, BMW has said the flagship dual sport model will be available in dealerships from 25 March, priced at £9755 on the road.

It will be joined by the K1200 GT tourer priced at £11,955 and following closely behind will be the R1200 S sports boxer (£8955), the new F800 S (£5995) and half-faired F800 ST sports tourer (£6495), all due to be launched to the public in the spring.

BMW Motorrad UK's general manager, Adrian Roderick, said: "The 2006 BMW Motorrad model line-up is the most exciting yet. Such a new and varied model choice enables us to offer customers a range that is not only competitively priced but also offers high residual values and other benefits of ownership that our competitors will find hard to match."
